

SLAYVERSE PITCH DECK — IMAGE BRIEF

Model: black-forest-labs/flux-1.1-pro (Flux 1.1 Pro)

Format: PNG, 16:9 aspect ratio

Generation Script: generate_images.py

1. COVER.PNG

Slide: Cover (Slide 1) + Emotional Spine (Slide 14)

Role: The single most important image in the deck. The exec decides in 3 seconds.

Prompt:

Cinematic ultra-wide shot of a lone cowboy figure seen from behind, standing at a barbed wire fence on a vast Wyoming prairie at twilight. The sky is fractured with hairline cracks of impossible crystalline light bleeding through, like reality itself is damaged. Dust particles suspended in golden hour light. Roger Deakins cinematography. Desaturated earth tones contaminated by cold blue-violet fracture light. Massive negative space in upper third for title placement. Photorealistic, film grain, anamorphic lens flare. 8K.

Art Direction:

- The fractures should be subtle — hairline cracks, not dramatic tears
- Earth tones dominate; violet-blue is contamination, not feature
- Figure should be small against landscape — scale is the argument
- Upper third MUST be open for title overlay

Alternatives for Regeneration:

- Try "Emmanuel Lubezki golden hour" instead of Deakins for warmer feel
- Reduce fracture intensity: "barely visible hairline cracks in the sky, almost imperceptible"
- Try silhouette version: "figure in pure silhouette against fractured twilight sky"

2. WORLD-WYOMING.PNG

Slide: Series Overview (Slide 2)

Role: Establish the world. The ranch as character.

Prompt:

Aerial cinematic shot of a desolate ranch in the Powder River Basin, Wyoming. The land is cracked and dry. In the south pasture, a subtle geometric pattern is visible in the grass — a spiral sigil burned into the earth, glowing faintly with amber light from underground. Drone photography perspective, magic hour lighting. The ranch buildings are small against the enormous landscape. Terrence Malick visual style. Film grain, photorealistic. Composition with negative space on the left for text. 8K.

Art Direction:

- The sigil should be barely visible — wrong enough to notice, not enough to explain
- Ranch buildings should feel dwarfed, precarious
- Warm magic hour but with something subtly off in the light

Alternatives for Regeneration:

- Ground-level version: "low angle shot across cracked earth toward distant ranch buildings"
 - Remove sigil for subtlety: focus on the wrongness of the light instead
 - Try SDXL for a more painterly/Malick feel

3. CHARACTER-JAKE.PNG

Slide: Jake McCullen (Slide 7)

Role: Character card. The audience meets the protagonist.

Prompt:

Cinematic medium close-up portrait of a weathered cowboy in his 40s, face half-lit by dying golden light, half in deep shadow. Dust on his hat brim. Expression is closed, guarded, carrying weight he will not name. Background is out-of-focus prairie at dusk. Roger Deakins single-source lighting. The quality of a still from a Coen Brothers film. Photorealistic, film grain, shallow depth of field. Negative space on the right for text overlay. 8K.

Art Direction:

- NOT rugged-handsome Hollywood cowboy. Weathered. Worn. Real.
- The expression is the whole image — guarded, not brooding
- Half-lit face is non-negotiable. Shadow side = what he won't say.
- Right side of frame must be open for text

Alternatives for Regeneration:

- Full silhouette at fence: "silhouette of a cowboy at a barbed wire fence, golden hour backlighting"
- Hands close-up: "weathered hands gripping a fence post, white-knuckle grip, golden dust in light"
- Try Flux Dev for faster iteration on expression

4. CHARACTER-WEAVER.PNG

Slide: The Weaver (Slide 8)

Role: Character card. The disruptive force.

Prompt:

Cinematic portrait of a mysterious figure in dark precise clothing standing in a Wyoming kitchen at 3AM. Single overhead light casting dramatic shadows. The figure is unnervingly still, looking at something the viewer cannot see. The composition suggests someone who does not belong to this century. David Lynch unsettling beauty. Cold blue ambient light mixing with warm tungsten. Photorealistic, film grain. Negative space on the left. 8K.

Art Direction:

- The Weaver should feel WRONG in this space — too precise, too still
- Kitchen should be mundane ranch kitchen, not stylized
- The contrast between domestic space and otherworldly presence IS the image

- Cold/warm light split mirrors the character's dual nature

Alternatives for Regeneration:

- Outdoor version: "figure in dark clothing standing motionless in a Wyoming field at 3AM, moonlight"
 - Close-up: "extreme close-up of eyes that seem to be looking at something in another century"
 - Try adding "Gregory Crewdson suburban dread" for more uncanny valley

5. CHARACTER-POP.PNG

Slide: Pop & VUORSE split (Slide 9)

Role: Character moment. Intimacy and devastation.

Prompt:

Cinematic close-up of elderly weathered hands cradling a translucent crystal that pulses with faint internal light, like a heartbeat made visible. The hands are gnarled, trembling. Background is a dark porch at night. The crystal casts prismatic light across the old mans fingers. Intimate, devastating. Emmanuel Lubezki natural light. Film grain, photorealistic. 8K.

Art Direction:

- The crystal light should be the ONLY warm element in the frame
- Hands tell the whole story — trembling, gnarled, holding something precious/dangerous
- This is the most intimate image in the deck. Macro tenderness.

Alternatives for Regeneration:

- Full figure: "elderly man in rocking chair on dark porch, holding faintly glowing crystal, singing"
 - Abstract: "prismatic light refracting through a crystal onto weathered wood, porch at night"
 - Try 1:1 aspect ratio for tighter crop

6. CHARACTER-VUORSE.PNG

Slide: Pop & VUORSE split (Slide 9)

Role: Character introduction. Cosmic oracle energy.

Prompt:

Cinematic portrait of a luminous figure in an otherworldly mirrored caftan, standing in a liminal space between a star field and a dusty western landscape. The figure radiates warmth and ancient knowledge. Prismatic light refracts around them like a halo made of broken timelines. The expression is warm, sly, and carrying centuries of exhaustion and love. High fashion meets cosmic oracle. Photorealistic, editorial photography quality. Film grain. 8K.

Art Direction:

- NOT campy. NOT costume-y. Genuinely luminous and otherworldly.
- The liminal space between star field and prairie is the key composition
- Expression must carry both warmth and weariness — someone who has watched this for centuries
- Editorial fashion quality, not fantasy illustration

Alternatives for Regeneration:

- Silhouette version: "figure in mirrored caftan silhouetted against a star field, prismatic edge light"
 - Voice-only evocation: "sound waves visualized as golden light emanating from darkness"
 - Try SDXL for more stylized/editorial feel

7. BRAIDED-STRUCTURE.PNG

Slide: Two Timelines. One Frequency. (Slide 6)

Role: Visualize the show's structural conceit.

Prompt:

Split-screen cinematic composition. Left half: a lone cowboy at a fence in Wyoming, desaturated earth tones, dust and silence. Right half: a candlelit European castle interior with a figure in period dress performing a ritual with mirrors, warm gold and crimson tones. A single luminous thread of light connects the two halves, running through the center seam. The thread is thin, golden, and unmistakable. Photorealistic, film grain. Wes Anderson symmetry meets Terrence Malick naturalism. 8K.

Art Direction:

- The split MUST feel intentional, not composited
- The golden thread connecting them is the most important element
- Color temperature contrast: cool desaturated left, warm saturated right
- Both halves should feel like complete frames from two different films

Alternatives for Regeneration:

- Vertical split instead of horizontal
- Abstract version: "two distinct color fields (earth brown, castle gold) connected by a single luminous thread"
- Try generating each half separately and compositing

8. TONE-MOOD.PNG

Slide: Why Now (Slide 3) + From the Writers Room (Slide 13)

Role: Tone-setter. The liminal mood of the entire show.

Prompt:

Cinematic wide shot of a Wyoming landscape at the precise moment between day and night. The sky is impossible — half golden prairie sunset, half deep cosmic void with faint crystalline fracture lines visible like scars in the atmosphere. A single fence line cuts across the frame. Dust suspended in the transitional light. The image should feel like the exact boundary between the natural and the supernatural. Gregory Crewdson meets Roger Deakins. Photorealistic, film grain, anamorphic. 8K.

Art Direction:

- The impossible sky is the centerpiece — natural on one side, cosmic void on the other
- The transition between the two should be gradual, not sharp
- The fence line grounds everything. Without it, this is just a landscape.
- Dust particles create the liminal atmosphere

Alternatives for Regeneration:

- Night version: "Wyoming prairie under stars, but the stars are wrong — too close, pulsing faintly"
- Intimate version: "ranch window at dusk, the view outside showing impossible light"
- Try "Vilmos Zsigmond diffused lighting" for softer transition

9. PILOT-SCENE.PNG

Slide: Pilot: Wind Over Dry Grass (Slide 10)

Role: Key scene from the pilot. Emotional gut punch.

Prompt:

Cinematic night scene on a ranch porch. An old man in a rocking chair holds a faintly glowing crystal, singing to it. Ten feet away, a younger man stands with his back turned, hands gripping a fence post, refusing to look. The only light comes from the crystal and a bare porch bulb. Moths circle the bulb. The emotional distance between the two figures is the entire frame. Intimate, devastating, Andrew Wyeth meets Cormac McCarthy. Photorealistic, film grain. 8K.

Art Direction:

- The DISTANCE between the two figures is the composition
- Crystal light warm, porch bulb cool — two light sources, two emotional states
- Moths are a nice texture detail but not essential
- This should feel like a painting. Andrew Wyeth loneliness.

Alternatives for Regeneration:

- Single figure version: "old man alone on dark porch singing to a faintly glowing crystal"
 - Abstract: "two light sources on a dark porch — one warm crystal glow, one bare bulb — ten feet apart"
 - Try wider shot to emphasize the landscape swallowing them both

10. SEASON-ARC.PNG

Slide: The World (Slide 5) + Season One (Slide 11)

Role: The fissure visualized. The wound in the land.

Prompt:

Abstract cinematic image of a crack in the earth seen from ground level, with faint light bleeding upward from the fissure. The crack runs from foreground to deep background across a dry prairie landscape. Wildflowers grow along its edges despite the arid ground. The light from within is warm amber shifting to cold blue-violet. It feels like the land is remembering something. Photorealistic, macro lens perspective transitioning to landscape. Film grain. 8K.

Art Direction:

- Ground-level perspective is critical — we are eye-level with the wound
- Wildflowers along the crack = beauty growing from damage. The show's thesis in one image.
- Amber-to-violet light shift mirrors the show's color language
- The crack should run deep into the frame, creating natural depth

Alternatives for Regeneration:

- Overhead: "aerial view of a crack in dry prairie earth, faint light visible from within"
 - Night version: "crack in earth at night, light pouring upward into starless sky"
 - Try SDXL for more painterly/abstract treatment

11. COMP-TITLES.PNG

Slide: Comparable Titles (Slide 4)

Role: Visual metaphor for the show's range — intimate to cosmic.

Prompt:

Cinematic diptych composition. A man alone in a room lit by a single dangling bulb, dissolving into a vast cosmic nebula in deep violet and gold. The transition is seamless — the room light becomes a star. The image captures intimate human drama and cosmic scale as the same thing. Photorealistic, film grain. 8K.

Art Direction:

- The dissolve/transition is the entire image — seamless, not jarring
- The dangling bulb literally becoming a star is the visual thesis
- Violet and gold are the show's cosmic palette
- Heavy overlay will be applied — image can be busier than most

Alternatives for Regeneration:

- Simpler: "a single light bulb hanging in darkness, its filament revealing a nebula within the glass"
- Split: "left half — dark room with single bulb; right half — cosmic nebula; same color temperature"
- Try Flux Dev for faster iteration on the dissolve effect

12. LEAVE-BEHIND.PNG

Slide: Leave-Behind (Slide 15)

Role: Last image. Clean. Professional. Haunting.

Prompt:

Minimal cinematic image of a single fence post in a Wyoming field at dawn. First light catching barbed wire. A faint spiral sigil is carved into the wood of the post, barely visible. Extreme simplicity. Negative space everywhere. The image should feel like the last frame of a pilot episode. Photorealistic, film grain, soft focus. 8K.

Art Direction:

- MINIMAL. This is the palette cleanser. The professional close.
- The sigil on the post should be almost invisible — a question, not an answer
- Dawn light = hope after the darkness of the deck's journey
- Negative space is critical — text will be centered over this

Alternatives for Regeneration:

- No sigil version: just the fence post and dawn light, pure simplicity
- Abstract: "first light on barbed wire, extreme close-up, soft focus, film grain"
- Try softer model for dreamier quality

GENERATION NOTES

- All images use `safety_tolerance: 3` to allow cinematic/mature content
- Run `python generate_images.py` to generate all images (skips existing)
- Re-run to retry any failures
- For higher quality iterations, consider using `black-forest-labs/flux-1.1-pro-ultra` when available
- Each image prompt is optimized for text overlay — negative space is built into the compositions
